Getting a Handle on Internal Controls

AGA announces a new audio conference on making internal controls work by considering risks to the organization and understanding the impact of inefficiencies on fraud, waste and abuse.

This audio conference addresses the elements of internal control from top management to operating levels. It includes the consequences of failing to pay attention to organization operations and the internal control environment, so often overlooked by auditors and management alike. Major inefficiencies creep into organizations with little or no internal controls, creating an environment where fraud, waste and abuse can, and often does, occur.

To share their knowledge and expertise in this area are:

William D. Miller, CGFM, CIA, county auditor, Johnson County, KS, and member of AGA's National Executive Committee.

CPE: Two credit hours

Field of Study: Accounting

Cost: $20 for Non-AGA members (Free for AGA members)
